About the Creator

Quenna Lené Barrett is a Chicago-based theater artist & practitioner, developing programs to amplify teen & community voices and hold space to rehearse, tell, and change the stories of their lives. She is a company member with the ICAH's For Youth Inquiry, Associate Artist with Pivot Arts, and is the Associate Director of Education at the Goodman Theatre. As a director and performer, she has worked with a number of companies including Sojourn, The Theatre School at DePaul, Free Street, Pegasus, Court, eta, and Theater Unspeakable. Continuing to build the world she wants to see/live in, she is currently re-writing the Declaration of Independence as a participatory play.

The Inspiration

This piece was inspired, in part, by conversations with my family about South side neighborhoods they felt get often underlooked, and that hold meaning to them as Black people who've lived here for decades. It was also inspired by the Movement for Black Lives and young, Black leaders in Chicago, often women and/or femme and/or queer who are radically imagining and fighting to build Black futures.

About Stacey's Walk

Located in the South Shore Neighborhood While on a walk to cool down from an argument with her mother, a young, Black Chicagoan finds herself exploring a neighborhood close to home. Stacey encounters some places from her family's memories, and conjures up her own. Take a walk on Stacey's path as she recounts these stories, remembering the past to plant seeds for her future.

Before You Start...

Before heading out on this exciting adventure, we recommend you:

- Download this map from the chicagochildrenstheatre.org and review it first.
- You may also want to bring a bluetooth speaker or some wireless headphones so everyone in the family can listen together.
- We recommend listening to the podcast once before venturing out on your hike

References

Ingredients:

- three 4-ounce bars (339g) semi-sweet or milk chocolate, finely chopped*
- 1 and 1/2 cups (360ml) heavy cream
- 6 egg whites, at room temperature
- 1 and 1/2 cups (300g) granulated sugar
- 3/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
- 30–36 full-sheet graham crackers (a little over 1 standard box)

Instructions:

1. Line a 9×9-inch or 8×8-inch square baking pan with parchment paper, leave overhang on the sides.
2. Place chopped chocolate in a bowl. Heat cream in a small saucepan until it begins to gently simmer. Pour over chocolate and let it sit for 2-3 minutes to gently soften the chocolate. Slowly stir until completely combined. Cover and refrigerate
3. Place egg whites, sugar, and cream of tartar in a heatproof bowl. Set bowl over a saucepan filled with simmering water. Do not let it touch the water. Whisk constantly until sugar is dissolved. Add the vanilla extract, then beat on high speed for 5-6 minutes until stiff glossy peaks form. Remove 1 heaping cup, cover tightly, and refrigerate.
4. Spread a super thin layer of marshmallow meringue on the bottom of the pan. Top with a layer of graham crackers. Top with a layer of marshmallow meringue, then repeat.
5. Refrigerate, pour marshmallow topping and torch it!
